

Taboo, Sacrifice, and the Sacred

February 21-22, 2014

Keynote Round Table Discussion with Susan Baddeley, Université de Versailles Saint-Quentin-en-Yvelines and Fabrice Jejcic, Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique

Keynote Address by Valérie Loichot, Emory University

The Department of French Studies Graduate Student Association at Louisiana State University invites proposals for individual papers or panels on topics regarding taboo, sacrifice, the sacred, and their relations to one another in French and Francophone literature and linguistics.

We also encourage submissions of papers which compare various genres and eras, as well as those which regard film, music, performance, and other aspects of French and Francophone culture. Papers, in either French or English, should be no more than 20 minutes in length, and abstracts should include a 200-word summary as well as your university affiliation and contact information. Please send your abstracts by 21 December 2013 to:

John Patin and Chelsea Rye
DFSGSA President and Vice President
Louisiana State University lsufrenchconference@gmail.com